De Blasio kids crowned Mermaid Parade royalty

Royals. Dante and Chiara de Blasio will headline the annual Coney Island seaside ritual that takes place in June.

The first kids are also royalty — at least for a day.

Mayor Bill de Blasio's children, Dante and Chiara, were crowned King Neptune and Queen Mermaid of the 32nd Annual Coney Island Mermaid Parade on June 21.

Surrounded by scantily clad revelers, the mayoral teens will be wheeled through the parade's route on an antique wicker Boardwalk Rolling Chair that dates back to 1923.

"We are extraordinarily honored to have the participation of New York City's first family in the parade," Coney Island USA founder Dick Zigun said in a statement.

Next generation

"King Neptune and Queen Mermaid represent the young adults of New York City who are the next generation of visitors to Coney Island and Coney Island USA." Zigun

"King Neptune and Queen Mermaid represent the young adults of New York City who are the next generation of visitors to Coney Island and Coney Island USA," added Zigun, also known as the Mayor of Coney Island.

The seaside ritual is a celebration of ancient mythology and the largest art parade in the nation. Marching bands, drill teams, floats and antique cars will partake in the festivities, along with some 1,500 participants dressed as mermaids, amusement rides and Neptunes.

Founded in 1983, the Mermaid Parade pays tribute to Coney Island's Mardi Gras, which ran from 1903 to 1954. The parade was also established to give artistic New Yorkers an outlet for self-expression.

Sensitive. 9/11 Museum pulls controversial item from gift shop

The National September 11 Memorial Museum gift shop has pulled an item that provoked cries of protest for its insensitivity: a USA-shaped ceramic cheese platter marking the three spots where the hijacked airplanes went down, it said Thursday. "The commemorative tray that is meant for display, not serving, has been removed," a museum spokesperson said.

The new museum won mostly positive reviews when it opened recently.

But the museum's gift shop, which sells items such as fire department apparel and rescue vests for dogs, has come under criticism from some family members of those who died in the attacks. REUTERS

Fresh. Gowanus to be flushed with millions of gallons of water

It's taken four years for the city to reactivate a tunnel to flush millions of gallons of fresh water into the toxic Gowanus Canal in Brooklyn.

Even so, locals are relieved the city will address the polluted waterway.

"I can't stress how eager we are to see this project be complete," said Craig Hammerman, district manager for the local community board.

The flushing tunnel was shut down for repairs in 2010, not long after the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency named the Gowanus Canal a superfund site, after years of industrial pollution.

"The $177 million upgrade of the flushing tunnel is a significant milestone in the city's efforts to improve the health and cleanliness of the Gowanus Canal," Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Emily Lloyd said.

The activation of the three pumps means 252 million gallons of oxygenated water will wash pollutants through the Carroll Gardens, Park Slope and Red Hood neighborhoods the canal runs through.

- Fifth Avenue and East

- Fifth Avenue and West 57th Street

Bright. The setting sun aligns with Manhattan's street grid during the phenomenon.

Twice a year, a peculiar phenomenon lights up Manhattan's streets.

“Manhattanhenge,” also known as the Manhattan Solstice, occurs when the setting sun aligns with the east-west streets on the borough’s main grid.

The nickname, popularized by astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson, is derived from the vertical rock monument Stonehenge.

The sun rises to perfectly align with several of the stones on the solstices, signaling the changing season.

Manhattanhenge occurred Thursday night around 8:16 p.m. But, for

New Yorkers who missed the half sun's radiant glow illuminating the grid, there's still three more chances this year. Tyson recommends arriving at a clear cross street on Manhattan's east side a half-hour early.

This Friday, the full sun is on the grid at 8:18 p.m. July 11, the full sun will be on the grid again at 8:24 p.m. The half sun will be on the grid at 8:25 p.m. on July 12. METRO

California shooting. Gunman's parents describe 'hell on Earth'

The parents of Elliot Rodger, the gunman who killed six college students in a rampage in Southern California, are suffering "hell on Earth" knowing their son caused such a tragedy, they said in a statement on Thursday.

Rodger's family members are mourning the victims of Friday's mass shooting more than they are mourning their son, said family friend and spokesman Simon Astaire reading the statement on NBC's "Today" show.

"We are crying in pain for the victims and their families. It breaks our hearts on a level that we didn't think possible," said the statement he read by Chin Rodger and Peter Rodger, who is a Hollywood film director.

"The feeling of knowing that it was our son's actions that caused the tragedy can only be described as hell on Earth," they said in the statement.

Astaire added that the couple, who are divorced, have "diminished" since their son's killing spree.

"They have gone down in size. They're virtually unrecognizable," he said.

The parents have not read their son's manifesto, in which he laid out his plans to exact revenge for being rejected by women, he said.

Rodger emailed his deadly plans to several people before he drove through the streets of Isla Vista and gunned people down. REUTERS

So Many Activities... Such Great Value

My friends and I have spent a lot of our time in search of the perfect weekend getaway. Over the years, we've taken trips to the Hamptons and Fire Island, camping weekends upstate, and a bike trip in Vermont.

While each trip had its particular charms, each was somehow lacking that "perfect" vacation feel. We found the vacation we were seeking in an unlikely place... summer camp. Club Getaway, a "Camp for Grownups" on 300 acres in the Berkshire Mountains of Kent, Connecticut, provides everything we'd been looking for — plenty of cute single campers, summer activities galore and even a little romance for couples.

There is an abundance of instructed activities — trapeze, waterskiing, tennis, mountain and road biking, golf and rock climbing, to name a few.

I decide to try the trapeze for the first time. The cute, muscular instructor straps me into my harness, and before I know it, I am flying through the fresh mountain air.

Sports are not the only choices available to us. We take dance lessons, cooking classes with the Connecticut Culinary Institute, yoga, and our new favorite activity — wine tasting.

Each night is packed with party options. There are delicious dinners, live bands, dancing, even a roaring bonfire.

Club Getaway, a weekend sports and adventure resort, is located in the Berkshire Mountains of Kent, CT, just 90 minutes from NYC by car or Getaway Bus.

We managed to try kayaking, hiking, skiing, and tennis. All of our high energy activities have balanced out our unabashed consumption of cocktails, delicious food and roasted marshmallows.

We leave Club Getaway, satisfied that we have finally achieved our ideal mix of partying, healthy activities, nature, romance and fun, all rolled into one. The perfect weekend vacation.

A TALK WITH MY DOG

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN-POLITICS

Linda: We like them fine.
They're just so fast you'll never catch one.

Nola: How about the neighbor's cats?

Linda: Fair game.

I understand the dog's confusion, especially after this past week here in D.C.
This is a city where people constantly make a great fuss about ethics, right up until their principles collide with their politics. In principle everyone wants to chase down better schools; less crime; good jobs; affordable housing; and freedom of speech, religion and the press. Those are the squirrels.

Yet political alliances can run counter to all those good intentions:
Donors, activists, backroom deals and nod-and-a-wink promises of future employment can turn any issue into an untouchable rabbit. In short, every time some voters see gun violence, sexual assaults and bad treatment of veterans and want lawmakers to pursue those issues, other voters say "Not so fast. You might hurt my friends."

"It's very confusing," I said to the dog the other night. "How will this town ever sort this out and simply do the good work that needs doing?"

"Well," she said, "I scratch my head with my back foot."

"What? That doesn't make any sense," I replied.

She raised her newspaper and went back to reading. "Exactly."

Gaining cool. Apple to get Beats, music mogul Iovine for $3 billion

Apple Inc. will buy Beats for about $3 billion and bring recording mogul Jimmy Iovine into its ranks, hoping to win points with the music industry and help it catch up in fast-growing music streaming.

Iovine and rapper Dr. Dre should prove key in forging relationships with an industry that historically viewed Apple with suspicion, but in recent years has pressed the iPhone maker to do more on subscription services, a market expected to eclipse song downloads in the long run.

Iovine's music industry relationships could ease notoriously difficult licensing negotiations for a future streaming service, recording industry executives say.

"The ugly truth is that there is such a Berlin Wall between Silicon Valley and L.A.," Apple Chief Executive Tim Cook told the Wall Street Journal. "The two don't respect each other, don't understand each other."

The deal is seen as Apple's effort to jump-start an uneven attempt to make headway in music streaming, the fastest-growing segment of the market as iTunes sales decline.

Blames Obama

Boehner resists calls for veterans' chief ouster

Republicans stepped up their attacks on the Obama administration over a deepening Veterans Affairs health care delay scandal on Thursday, but House Speaker John Boehner again declined to join a growing list of lawmakers calling for VA Secretary Eric Shinseki to resign.

At a news briefing, Boehner said he was still not convinced that Shinseki's ouster would solve the VA's problems. Instead, he sought to keep the pressure on President Barack Obama for VA scheduling abuses that covered up monthslong delays for veterans' medical care appointments.

OMG! Sippable sunscreen could be answer to evening out

The days of having sun cream sloppily smeared onto your skin could be over with the arrival of the first drinkable sun protection. Osmosis Skincare claims its product, called Harmonized H2O UV — available in “tanning” and “nontanning” varieties that retail for $30 a bottle — provides defense comparable to SPF 30. Users are told to ingest a small dose of the water one hour prior to sun exposure, with the process repeated every four hours. Dr. Ben Johnson professes that the formula’s liquid molecules vibrate on the skin to cancel out 97 percent of UVA and UVB rays. Johnson tells Metro why his elixir has a bright future.

This product has received a lot of criticism by skin-care experts. Why do you think they’re wrong?

There are a lot of nay-sayers. The common misconception is that people think we’re using radio waves. We’re not because radio waves go right through water. What we’re actually doing is colliding radio waves in the presence of water and that creates what’s called a scalar wave (purported to be a form of electromagnetic wave).

Have you tried the product yourself?

Yes. About three years ago I started testing it and suffered a few sunburns in the process. After tweaking the formula, we tested about 50 people to see if it was consistently working, and basically it was.

Is this for people who hate sunscreen?

Right. [Sunscreen] is actually quite irritating. And the reason that I was looking for an alternative is because the waterproof chemical sunscreens on the market today are the ones that are bad for you.

Study

Porn may mess with your head

Men who report watching a lot of pornography tend to have less volume and activity in regions of the brain linked to rewards and motivation, says a new German study.

The results, published in JAMA Psychiatry, provide the first evidence for a link between porn consumption and reductions in brain size and activity in response to sexual stimuli, said Simone Kühn, the study’s lead author from the Max Planck Institute for Human Development, in an email.

For the study, she recruited 64 healthy men between the ages of 21 and 45 years and asked them questions about their porn-watching habits. They also took images of their

Practical spirituality

Happiness. Get on the path to inner peace with "The Practice."

Barb Schmidt had it all: a business empire, beauty, a handsome husband — the good life. But she also had a problem, and when it led her to seek therapy she found the happiness that had been missing all along.

"Bulimia is one of those diseases that takes a big physical and mental toll," she says.

Therapy "had to crack me open," she says. "When I left treatment, it propelled me to deepen my conscious concept of God."

Her new book, "The Practice," a three-part guide to daily life and cultivating inner peace, is the culmination of 30 years of education and the motivation behind Schmidt's nonprofit Peaceful Mind Peaceful Life. By structuring her methods around how she's applied them in her own life, "The Practice" is more self-help autobiography than a strict guidebook. And because you're all that stands in the way of your own happiness, "The Practice" is about spring cleaning the soul of some bad habits.

Get to know you

Schmidt works to "demystify" meditation. "The more we do that sitting process, the more we don't have the impatience, the anger and the violence that surround us."

Your best ally

"The mind will tell you you're not good enough," she says. But negative and positive thoughts can't co-exist; you decide the path.

Loosen up

The irony of the brain is that it tries to control the external world. But, "I can be in charge of my internal world, intercept the negative thoughts with affirmation, mantra or breath."

The three steps

1 Waking Up. "For five minutes in the morning, collect yourself. Let the energy of your body and your heart connect. Start with peace and strength, and you'll carry that connectedness — a deep sense of knowing that you can handle anything — all day."

2 Living Present. "When you're talking with someone, be there with them. When you're watching TV, pay attention to the program. When you recognize them, ordinary moments can become extraordinary."

3 Letting Go. "We can look back on the day and take a different action tomorrow, but we can't change anything that's happened. Take note of what happened, good or bad, and learn from it to sleep without conflict."

2 CULTURE

Voice work

The other Maleficent

Celebrities voicing animated characters is a mostly modern phenomenon, meaning the name of the woman who played the villain in 1959's "Sleeping Beauty" — Eleanor Audley — probably doesn't sound familiar. But her voice might. She also did the vocal work for the evil stepmother in Disney's "Cinderella."

Angelina Jolie gets to kick back and play bad in "Maleficent."
FILMMAGIC

Creeping beauty

Kicking back. Angelina Jolie enjoyed taking life less seriously for the fantasy "Maleficent."

For Angelina Jolie, taking on the title role in "Maleficent," which tells the story of "Sleeping Beauty" from the villain's perspective, might have seemed like a no-brainer. But Jolie herself had her doubts. "I was a bit nervous to take her on. This is such a crazy idea. I'm a fairy? 'How was your day, honey?' 'I was a fairy,'" Jolie remembers telling her partner, Brad Pitt. "I was so challenged by it. For me as an actress to do something where I'm not taking myself so seriously or doing it for myself or doing it for art — just to remember what it is to play and entertain and try something bold."

Kids these days

Jolie let her toddler daughter Vivienne appear in the film — a necessity since other children were too terrified of her in full makeup and costume. "Actually, one child completely froze and then cried. I felt so bad," Jolie admits. But she's hoping Vivienne's appearance does not set a precedent for her kids becoming actors. "If when they get older and they decide to be actors — I would just ask that that's not the center of their lives."

But once she had the horns and the augmented cheekbones and nose in place, she just went with it. "If you're going to do it, you can't just kind of do it. You have to go fully into it and enjoy it," she says. "I practiced a lot with my children. When I got them laughing, I figured I was onto something — well, they laughed, they cried."

Speaking of making kids laugh and cry, Jolie isn't concerned that some parents might find the darker elements of "Maleficent" tough for kids to take. "With a film like this, people ask, 'Is it too dark for children?' It's not," she says. "They want to understand things that frighten them. They want to see dark things that happen and how to rise above them. They don't want to be hidden from all things, everything sweetened."

Seth MacFarlane gets a bird in the face in "A Million Ways to Die in the West." / LOREY SEBASTIAN

Review

'A Million Ways to Die in the West'

Director: Seth MacFarlane

Stars: Seth MacFarlane, Charlize Theron

Rating: R

Making a Western — or even just spoofing one — in this day and age is a little insane. The genre is dead, gunned down by "The Lone Ranger." Technically speaking, Seth MacFarlane's "A Million Ways to Die in the West" is pure hubris, the result of him cashing in his "Ted" bucks to make something so against what's currently chic that it has a certain dignity.

That his latest also forces him to work without a few of his safety nets helps, too. For one thing, he portrays, not merely voices, Albert, an anachronistic smart-ass sheep farmer. He likes to relentlessly complain about the silliness of gunfights, bar fights and living in the Old West, where one can be randomly picked off by all manner of gruesome deaths.

The loosely plotted story has hottie gunslinger (Charlize Theron) helping Albert train for a gunfight with the dandy (Neil Patrick Harris) who absconded with his beloved (Amanda Seyfried). But it's really a series of sketches and gags about the Old West but not Western movies, per se. In fact, it's not clear if MacFarlane has ever even seen a Western. He seems to have absorbed the genre by osmosis, allowing him to riff on the basics: dirty bars, dirty prostitutes, dapper gentlemen with outized moustaches and dangerous/oppressed Native Americans. In fact, the only Western he seems to have seen is "Back to the Future Part III," the only film that gets a direct homage at all.

For someone who loves — annoyingly relies on, really — making endless references to things he watched as a kid, it's strange to see MacFarlane avoiding homages so studiously. Then again, this frees him up to indulge in what is his actual gift: unfettered loopiness. He approaches the Western not as a cinephile, but merely as someone who sat down and really thought about jokes to make about living in a not quite settled and relatively uncivilized locale.

This is funnier than a Western spoof, or at least more creative. But in truth, it's neither as silly or as ballsy as "Blazing Saddles," and even, for a few stretches, feels like an actual Western rather than a pastiche. (No one seems to have told Theron or Liam Neeson, as a fearsome outlaw, that this was a comedy.) As an actor, MacFarlane's not bad — a winning schlub with decent screen presence. In fact, like the Neeson business, he seems to have taken the zero-to-hero role a bit too seriously. It's not entirely clear why MacFarlane made "A Million Ways to Die in the West," other than to give him a chance to make out with hot actresses.

Drawn. Vonnegut's daughter put his artistic works in a new book

Kurt Vonnegut is known for his satirical novels. But he was an equally talented artist who first published his graphic art in his novels "Slaughterhouse-Five" and "Breakfast of Champions." Now, his drawings are bound in the book "Kurt Vonnegut: Drawings," which features an introduction by his daughter, Nanette Vonnegut.

At a special exhibition and book signing May 14 at the Margo Feiden Gallery, Nanette told us more about her father's work:

What is your favorite drawing by your father, and why?

My favorite is the self-portrait [pictured]. It is one continuous line that includes so much: a window with a blue flower in it, buttons on his shirt and his signature. I love it because it looks exactly like him and because it is beautifully integrated as a piece of art. I can tell he had a lot of fun with that one.

The novelist's drawings are now available in book form in "Kurt Vonnegut: Drawing."

Why do you think your father's legacy holds strong today?

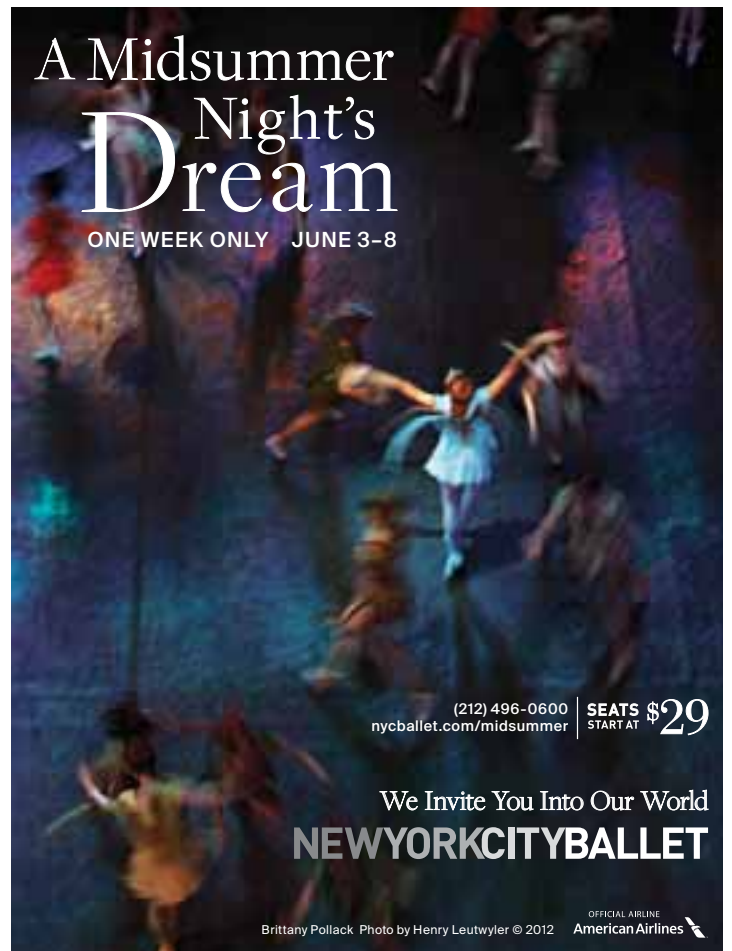

My father has such holding power on so many because he speaks timeless truths about who we are as human beings — our failings as well as our potential for good. While doing all that, he manages to make us laugh out loud in recognition. ... That is his enduring genius.

Does your father influence your writing and art?

I am always surprised to see his voice show up in my writing and in my art. So much of him is in my bones, whether I like it or not. I think in trying to find my own voice, I have finally allowed his to be there as a low hum, weaving its way in and out of whatever I do. I have to tell stories even in making pictures. DANIELLE KALAMARAS

Being attacked is the Pitts

The red carpet's least favorite Ukrainian strikes again.

Just two weeks after sticking his head under America Ferrera's dress in Cannes, celebrity reporter Vitalii Sediuk crashed the "Maleficent" red carpet at El Capitan theater in Hollywood and allegedly attacked Brad Pitt while he was signing autographs.

Was Pitt punched? Several reports differ; some are even saying that eyewitnesses saw Pitt hit the attacker back.

Either way, we're hearing Pitt wasn't too fazed. He just replaced his infamous dark sunglasses and kept signing autographs for fans alongside partner Angelina Jolie.

Sediuk was picked up by LAPD and charged with battery. Guess his efforts to revive "Fight Club" aren't going to happen!

Breaking boundaries

Even in 2014, there are still social barriers to be broken. For the first time in its history, TIME Magazine is featuring a transgender person on its cover. Laverne Cox, one of the stars of the popular Netflix series "Orange Is the New Black," graces the cover on the edition that is on newsstands now. The cover story with Cox, called "The Transgender Tipping Point," has the transgender actress talking about respect and violence numbers among transgender people. Cox tweeted on Thursday that the cover story was a "lovely bday present."

Reading Rainbow is returning!

Whether you grew up with "Reading Rainbow" or you just know Jimmy Fallon's Doors-inspired riff on the theme song, you'll be psyched to learn that LeVar Burton, original host of the popular PBS children's book series, is bringing it back. In under a day, a Kickstarter campaign raised more than $2 million to create both a Web series and school reading program. Burton celebrated by doing a Reddit AMA, where most of the comments were heartfelt thanks.

Don't be a rogue rider

I never ride against traffic; you can't see the reverse traffic signs and lights if you're behind them. It's extremely dangerous when you have cars and other cyclists coming toward you. You are putting other cyclists in danger. You won't be able to ride fast and react in time if you're pinned between oncoming traffic and parked cars. Some people like to be rogue amateur riders, but you'll soon lose some organs and limbs or end up dead. It's like having projectiles coming toward you. There are plenty of professional cycling websites that forbid riding against traffic. Do your research, don't listen to a rogue cyclist. BRUCE WILLIAMS, VIA EMAIL

Gun, mental issues related

Re: 'Not a gun law issue' (Metro, May 29) Could you cite a real-world example of violence against women being "belittled"? If any violence is "seen as a joke," it's violence against men, who make up the majority of victims except those of rape. Yes, many people with mental health issues don't murder, but why does that preclude mental illness causing Elliot Rodger's rampage? He refused to take recommended schizophrenia drugs. That should have prevented him from buying guns. BEN CAMPBELL, VIA EMAIL

Rangers advance to Cup with home win

NHL playoffs. New York will compete for its first Stanley Cup in two decades after winning Game 6 over Montreal.

Henrik Lundqvist jumped once, then twice, as a wave of blue-clad teammates skated toward their goaltender, ready to embrace him.

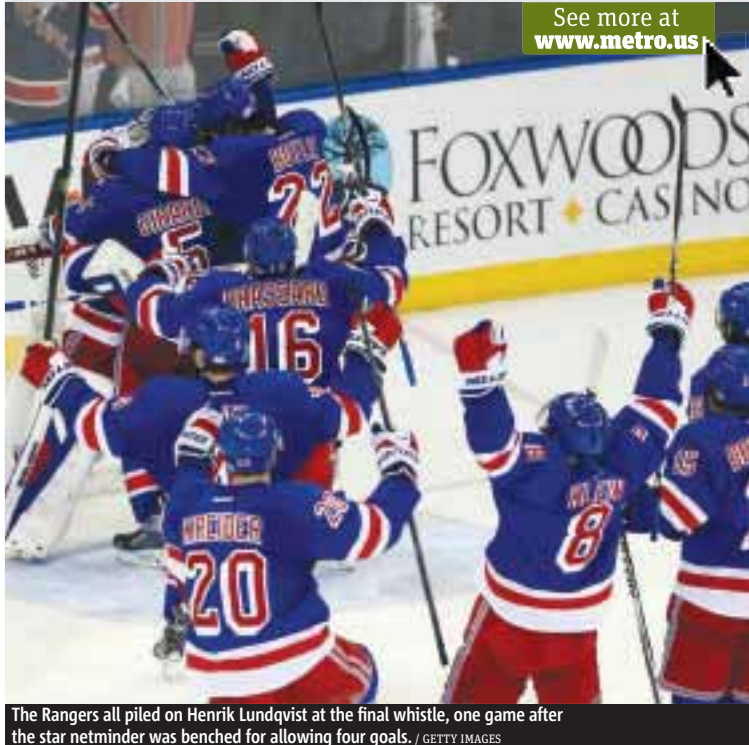

Simply, it was the biggest moment so far in a lifetime of hard work.

Lundqvist made 18 saves to record his franchise record-tying ninth playoff shutout in the Rangers' 1-0 win over the Canadiens in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals Thursday night at the Garden.

The Rangers won the best-of-seven series, 4-2. The Rangers will meet the winner of the Chicago-Los Angeles Western Conference finals starting Wednesday night. Los Angeles leads the best-of-seven series, 3-2, with Game 6 on Friday night in Los Angeles.

The Rangers won both regular season meetings with the Blackhawks, and split two games against the Kings.

Canucks-Rangers Stanley Cup Final. The Rangers won that game, 3-2, to win the franchise's first Cup since 1940, and their fourth overall.

And the Rangers played like it meant everything.

It was Lundqvist and Canadiens goaltender Dustin Tokarski's game. The two traded highlight-reel saves much of the night.

But just 1:50 before the second period ended, the Rangers fourth line broke the deadlock as

1 All 'four' one

The Rangers will tell you the biggest difference between John Tortorella and Alain Vigneault is the latter's willingness to roll four lines. In Game 6, it was the fourth line of Brian Boyle, Dominic Moore and Derek Dorsett that opened the game with a strong forechecking shift which led to two shots on goal.

2 The King is back

3 Good start

The Rangers talked about putting forth a better effort than Tuesday. In the first period of Game 6, they did everything but put the puck behind Dustin Tokarski. The Rangers outshot the Canadiens, 11-5, and out-attempted their Original Six rival 22-12.

Report: Top bid for Clips worth $2B

If your bid was less than $2 billion, you aren't going to be the proud owner of a shiny NBA franchise.

The Los Angeles Times reported Thursday that former Microsoft CEO Steve Ballmer has bid $2 billion to purchase the Clippers. ESPN reports music executive David Geffen's bid was second-most at $1.6 billion. Ballmer, 58, is reportedly worth $20 billion. The Sterling family still has to agree to the sale.

NFL. Eli Manning already looking better seven weeks after surgery

The Giants began their second phase of organized team activities this week and despite all the new faces they've added this offseason, the sight of a familiar one was the biggest story of the day.

Eli Manning, who is seven weeks removed from ankle surgery, was thought to be out for all spring activities — and maybe even part of training camp. But there he was throwing passes and handing off as if nothing ever happened.

"[The doctors] said it was a six-week [recovery], but they didn't really tell me if it was six weeks until I could start doing things or six weeks until I'm full speed," Manning said. "But when they said six weeks, I kind of had it in my head that I should be ready [for OTAs]."

"I didn't think we'd have him for anything," said Coughlin. "Two or three days into Phase 2 and he's out there running around, and I'm trying to slow him down, but he says he feels good." TONY WILLIAMS
